What are Singular and Plural Nouns?

Before we begin our exploration, let's understand the basics. Nouns are words used to name people, places, animals, and things. They form the backbone of any sentence! Now, when we talk about singular and plural nouns, we are referring to whether we are talking about one thing or more than one.

For example, when we say "dog," we're talking about one dog. But if we say "dogs," we're referring to more than one dog. The addition of the "s" at the end of the word changes it from singular to plural. Fascinating, right?
