You can take the man out of the Mountain, but can you ever really take the Mountain out of the man?

When the love of my life walked away from me, it left a wound that never healed.

She moved on, just like she said she would, and found someone else to give her what she needed.

I had to get away, take a trip...just to escape. No one was more shocked than me when I was “discovered” and became a male model.

A life of celebrity, parties and fast women ensued.

That was ten years ago.

Ten years of traveling, ten years of living the high life; ten years of being fawned over, under glittering lights, among beautiful people.

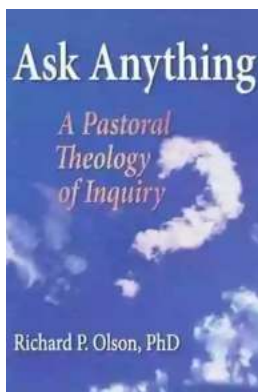

But not a single real connection...and no real escape from the emptiness in my heart.

Why did it take losing her to find out how much I loved her?

Now, I'm rich and retired. And I've returned to my home town with one mission only: To sell the old homestead and wrap up my affairs there, forever.

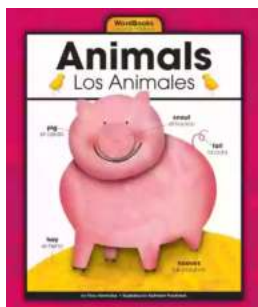

But there's a surprise waiting when I get there.

And I'm a man on a new mission, now.
