The landscapes of the Pakistan Afghan borderland are truly awe-inspiring. The towering peaks of the Hindu Kush mountain range dominate the skyline, their jagged silhouettes etched against the vast expanse of the sky. The lush green valleys and meandering rivers provide a stark contrast to the barren deserts that stretch as far as the eye can see.

A Historic Crossroad

Throughout history, the Pakistan Afghan borderland has been a crossroad for civilizations and a melting pot of cultures. It has been a gateway for traders, scholars, and conquerors to traverse between the Indian subcontinent, Central Asia, and the Middle East. This has left an indelible mark on the region, evident in its architecture, language, and cuisine.

One of the most remarkable historical sites in the Pakistan Afghan borderland is the legendary city of Peshawar. Known as the "City of Flowers," Peshawar has been a hub of trade and cultural exchange for thousands of years. Its old quarter, with its narrow winding streets and bustling bazaars, is a treasure trove of hidden gems waiting to be discovered.

A Tapestry of Cultures

The cultural diversity of the Pakistan Afghan borderland is unlike anywhere else in the world. As you wander through its towns and villages, you will encounter the vibrant traditions of the Pashtuns, Balochis, Sindhis, Punjabis, Tajiks, Uzbeks, and many other ethnic groups. Each community has its own unique customs, festivals, and cuisine, adding to the richness and flavor of the region.

The cuisine of the Pakistan Afghan borderland is a true reflection of its cultural diversity. From mouth-watering kebabs and aromatic biryanis to hearty stews and flavorful curries, the food here is a celebration of flavors and spices. Don't miss the opportunity to sample some of the local delicacies, as they will leave your taste buds craving for more.

Hidden Treasures

As you explore the Pakistan Afghan borderland, you will stumble upon hidden treasures that will take your breath away. From ancient forts and palaces to majestic mosques and shrines, every corner of this region has a story to tell. Some of the must-visit sites include the historic Bala Hisar Fort, the iconic Qissa Khwani Bazaar, and the magnificent Shah Jahan Mosque.

For nature enthusiasts, the Pakistan Afghan borderland offers a plethora of opportunities to witness the wonders of the natural world. The Khyber Pass, a historic trade route connecting Pakistan and Afghanistan, provides breathtaking views of the surrounding mountains. The picturesque Swat Valley, with its emerald-green meadows and crystal-clear lakes, is a paradise for hikers and nature lovers.

An Adventure Waiting to Happen

The Pakistan Afghan borderland is a playground for adventure seekers. Whether you are a trekking enthusiast, a history buff, or a curious traveler, this region has something to offer for everyone. Embark on a thrilling journey through time as you visit ancient ruins and archaeological sites, or challenge yourself to conquer the mighty peaks of the Hindu Kush.

The Pakistan Afghan borderland is a hidden gem waiting to be discovered. Its mesmerizing landscapes, rich history, and vibrant cultures make it a destination like no other. Whether you are drawn to its ancient ruins, its bustling marketplaces, or its breathtaking mountains, this region promises an unforgettable adventure. In this major study of Pashtun tribal hybridization shifting toward Salafism Islam, Dr. Idris argues that central to the understanding of the current militancy and extremism in Pakistan and Afghanistan is the recognition of the methods utilized as the Salafists made inroads into Pashtun society along with the impact of Salafists on the tribal, social, political, religious, cultural, and even the daily lives of the Pashtuns. This study utilizes a series of case studies from a small village in the Pashtun border region to demonstrate that the Pashtun tribes in the Pakistan-Afghanistan borderland are in the process of shifting toward Salafism as their traditional Hanafi Sufism beliefs are discarded. The author argues that this shift has been undermining the traditional tribal and religious structure to create much of the instability that fuels conflict in the region.

"The borderlands between Afghanistan and Pakistan where the Pashtun tribes live remain one of the most volatile places in the world. Nothing is more important, therefore, than to understand the dynamic in that society between religious and tribal leadership. Khan Idris' book could not be more timely as it focuses on precisely this area and this problem. It is a book that must be read by everyone wanting peace and stability for the peoples of that region."

- Ambassador Akbar Ahmed, Ibn Khaldun Chair of Islamic Studies, School of International Service, American University

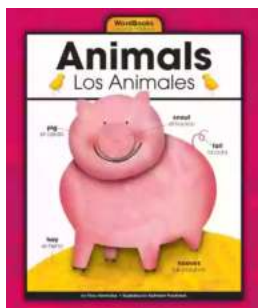

"An authentic, penetrating view of the gravitation of a traditional Pashtun tribe towards an intolerant branch of Islam, Salafism. This study greatly aids our appreciation of an on-going religious, social, and political transformation in the borderlands that carries the potential to spread to the rest of Pakistan and radically alter its regional and international posture."
