'Mr. Patel owns a hotel' is a little poem book that a child can illustrate, it contains very simple descriptions of what Mr. Patel does, his family and where he came from. The idea came to me as I work with a team of people that call hotels and sometimes 4 of us will be calling 'Mr. Patel.' The Patel family name is well known to me having come from West London but not so well known to my colleagues who at one point all thought they knew 'Mr. Patel.' I explained the history to them and it is an interesting one. The families with the surname/last name 'Patel' have indeed done really well in the Hotel Industry in North America so I wrote this little poem book to that effect; if a child chooses the print option I have included prompts for pictures, it's a bit of fun really with some knowledge inbetween the lines. I imagine children in India and all over the world would enjoy it. It's just enough information to spark questions about different cultures and people from different backgrounds.
