Love, with all its beautiful complexities, has the power to uplift, inspire, and ignite passion within us. It can make us feel like we are floating on cloud nine, invincible and untouchable. But what happens when love fades away? When the person who once brought color to our world becomes a distant memory?

The emptiness that follows a loss can be overwhelming. It can leave us feeling adrift, questioning our worth and purpose. The pain digs deep into our souls, reminding us of what once was, and the void left behind. We may find ourselves longing for closure, for the chance to say goodbye or to hold onto a glimmer of hope.

Loneliness, like a cold winter's day without any warmth, can seep into our bones and consume us from the inside out. It is the feeling of being invisible in a crowded room, of craving connection but feeling unable to find it. Loneliness can be hauntingly quiet, amplifying our vulnerabilities and reminding us of our human need for companionship.

In the midst of love and loss, loneliness and despair, we are forced to confront our true identity. Who are we without the love we once knew? Without the person who meant the world to us? These questions can be terrifying, as we come face to face with the fragility of our own existence.

But it is through these moments of darkness that we have the opportunity to rediscover ourselves. To nurture the parts of us that have been neglected and overlooked. To find solace in the depths of our own being and grow from the seeds of heartbreak.

Our identity is not solely defined by the relationships we form or the love we receive. It is a tapestry woven by our experiences, our passions, and our resilience in the face of adversity. It is a testament to the strength within us that allows us to rise above the pain and find a new sense of purpose.

So, dear reader, if you have ever experienced love, loss, loneliness, or questioned your own identity, know that you are not alone. These reflections are a part of the human journey, and it is through embracing them that we discover the depths of our own humanity.

Hold onto hope, for it is the guiding light that leads us out of the darkness. Embrace the lessons that love, loss, and loneliness impart, for they have the power to shape us into stronger, more compassionate beings. And above all, remember that your identity is a reflection of your own unique, beautiful soul.

Here it is an ideal gift for your loved ones as a beautifully compiled book of love poems !!The casual, but incisive wit of Akhtar Mehmood, entices the reader into a no man's land: explosive heartbreaks, erotic musings, tales of love lost, earned sorrow, and a bone-crushing sense of loneliness in a crowded world. He wraps modern love in sensuous velvety metaphors, unheard in typical poetry books. His poetry has found fans worldwide who cherish his sad overtones and a touch of darkness, even when he decodes self-love in many forms. Many elements find their ways into his poems about being alone and scared, like the Moon and its Stars, The Ocean and its Waves, and the Sun and her Flowers. Through his vast imaginative powers in his poetry of love, he gives voice to the things we can not say in our everyday lives.
