One of Paz's most renowned works, "Sunstone," showcases his ability to seamlessly blend sensuality and spirituality. This mesmerizing piece takes readers on a journey into the realm of desire, intertwining the physical and the metaphysical in a symphony of words.

The poem opens with the following lines:

“My eyes search for her as though to mint
the face I imagine in the facelessness
of the subway crowds.
which is reflected in the windowpane,
is shrouded with indifference,
and seems to us like The Sleeping Beauty.”

Through evocative imagery and sensual language, Paz paints a vivid picture of longing and desire. The poem continues to delve into themes of love and passion, exploring the intricate nuances of human relationships.

The Nobel Prize–winning poet and man of letters Octavio Paz was also a brilliant reader of other writers, and this book selects his best critical essays from over three decades. In the sixteen pieces collected here, Paz discusses a wide range of poets and writers, both American and international, from Robert Frost and Walt Whitman to William Carlos Williams; from Fyodor Dostoevsky to Luis Buñuel to Alexander Solzhenitsyn; and from Charles Baudelaire to Jean-Paul Sartre, André Breton, and Henri Michaux.

Paz writes, “I believe that a writer’s attitude to language should be that of a lover: fidelity and, at the same time, a lack of respect for the beloved object. Veneration and transgression.” When this original thinker meets these writers, each essay is an adventure of the mind.
