The most populous black nation state and Africa's largest democracy, Nigeria, is beset with Boko Haram militancy. This Islamic insurgency has wreaked untold havoc on lives and properties causing unquantifiable economic losses for the country. In reaction, the nation's Armed Forces have intensified their war against this hitherto underrated insurrection with the help of forces from neighbouring countries on what can be described as final full scale battle against Boko Haram. Incidentally, the strength of this aggressive religious sect not only lies in their fighters and armaments but also in the minds of many of their invisible advocates or supporters across the country. These radicalized Muslims who have bought into the extremist ideology continually remain source of sponsorship, resurgence, recruitment, and sympathy for this fundamentalist movement opening a second frontier of battle that must be waged to achieve a coup de grace against this Islamic group.

Panacea to Boko Haram Attacks in Nigeria Vol. II aims to scrutinize this more crucial frontier of war prescribing package of solutions including counter-indoctrination against radicalism to stop Boko Haram extremism in Nigeria.
