Understanding Verb Pp and Gerund in Spanish

Spanish verbs can be tricky, especially when it comes to understanding the concepts of present participle (pp) and gerund. Many learners confuse these two verb forms, leading to errors in their writing and speaking. Let's break it down:

The present participle (pp) is formed by adding '-ando' to -ar verbs, and '-iendo' to -er and -ir verbs. For example, the verb 'hablar' (to speak) becomes 'hablando' (speaking). The pp is used to form progressive tenses (e.g., "estoy hablando" - I am speaking) and as an adjective (e.g., "un niño hablante" - a speaking child).

The gerund, on the other hand, is formed by adding '-ando' to -ar verbs, and '-iendo' to -er and -ir verbs. It is used to express ongoing or continuous actions. For example, "estoy estudiando" means "I am studying." The gerund is often used with the verb 'estar' (to be) to form the present progressive tense.

We can use the conjugated helping verb of “haber” plus past participle to form various perfect tense. The most often used verbs with PP are “estar” and “ser”, resembling the passive voice construction in English. However, “PP” can be an adjective following a noun, or used independently. The past participle can also immediately follow certain other conjugated verbs.

Gerund can be used to make compound verb to form present or past progressive tense. They can also follow other conjugated verbs, such as verb of perception. Participial phrase is formed by a Gerund or PP. Spanish verb of becoming is a very common expression, and useful to show changes in emotion. The most common way in Spanish to express “to begin, or to start” is also included in this book.
