Unveiling the Gems Inside the Young Writer Kit

The Young Writer Kit is more than just a box of pens and notebooks. It's a carefully curated collection of items that will inspire your imagination, enhance your writing skills, and nurture your passion for storytelling. Let's explore the treasures that await:

1. An Inspiring Journal

Every young writer needs a dedicated space to jot down their thoughts, ideas, and emotions. This beautiful journal is a blank canvas waiting for your words to breathe life onto its pages. It features a handy pen holder and a pocket for stashing away loose notes and inspirational tidbits.

2. A World-Building Toolkit

World Building: D6 Quick-Build

'Location'

'1' represents a prominent location marker on the world map, such as the site of a city or an ancient temple.

'Settlement'

'2' represents outlying towns and village markers on the world map. Both dots can represent individual settlement locations, or one a town/village and the other a city.

'Divide'

'3' represents dividers on the world map. These can be mountain ranges, rivers or valleys. Could also be used as a great, fortified wall.

'Flatland'

'4' represents flatland areas of the world map. These areas could be grassland plains, arid desert or bodies of water. Flatland could also represent farmland or unknown territory.

'Dungeon'

'5' represents underground locations. The central dot is the dungeon location, whether that be a mine or a crypt. The surrounding dots can represent overworld terrain or castle walls.

'Canopy'

'6' represents thick, canopied areas of the world, such as woodland, forests, rainforests or jungles. This could also represent any form of difficult terrain.

If you're wanting to quickly build a game world, or if you prefer to run your games in smaller settings, the D6 Quick-Build method is an easy way to invent a playable landscape. Dotted dice work better, rather than numbered, as some of the dots will be marks for prominent locations on the world map.

111- XD6 = WORLD SIZE:

10D6 is a good place to start. If you want your world, continent or island to be larger, add more dice.

121- ROLL XD6:

Roll your dice and see what numbers you get and compare them to the labelled dice above.

131- LET THE DICE DETERMINE THE WORLD'S THEME:

If you don't roll any 'Divide', then assume your world is a sweeping, flat wilderness. Alternatively, if you don't roll any 'Canopy', then your world is void of jungles and forests, perhaps it is a desolate wasteland.

141- POSITION DICE:

Position your rolled dice beside one another to create the world map, such as the example below. Try to connect your 'Divide' dice to give the world map a feeling of flow and consistency, and spread your 'Location' dice out across the D6 map.

151- DECIDE TERRAIN:

Using the ideas above, decide what each Location, Settlement, Divide, Flatland, Dungeon and Canopy represents, and make a note of this.

161- CONSIDER THE BORDERS:

What lies beyond the D6 world map? Perhaps the edges of the dice map represents the borders of a specific country or continent, or it could be the vast oceans, in which case the world map is an island.

Example

The D6 World Map example to the right shows a quickly formed world. We can see that a great mountain range (3) runs past two cities (1), one of which resides between the mountains and a vast forested area (6). In the edges of either side of the world map reside dungeons (5), entrances into a world beneath these forgotten forts, one of them near two villages (2). Far to the south, beyond the forests and beside the second city, stretches the flatland of a desert (4).

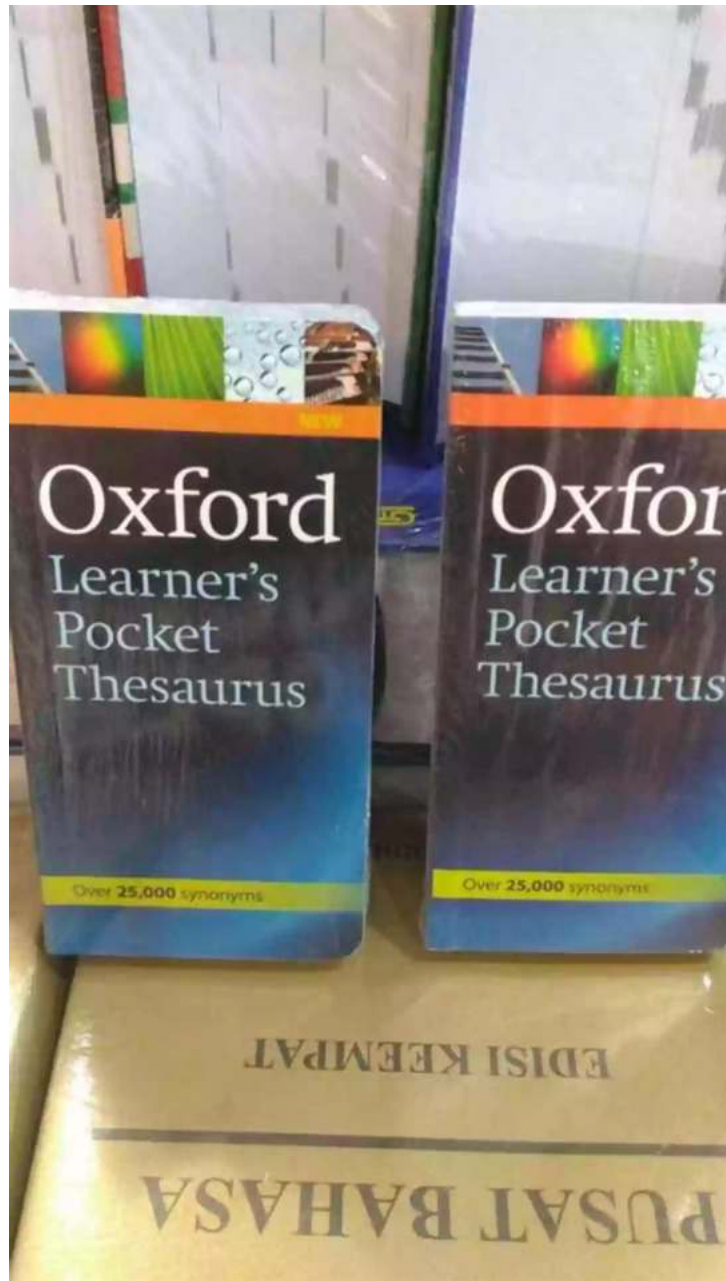

Creating a compelling fictional world is at the heart of every captivating story. With the Young Writer Kit's world-building toolkit, you'll have everything you need to construct vibrant settings, believable characters, and intricate plotlines. From map-drawing tools to character development prompts, this toolkit will make your stories come alive.
